I think so. However, Valois will put all of these together with the most current version of the briefing document for my review late today. We want to get all of this to you by tomorrow. Darcy knows that Valois and Lucita are available to address your comments, etc. so we can get this to her prior to the 9th floor's Thursday, COB deadline.

Hey Douglas -- I have the figures from the briefing last week that Valois printed in color. Not sure whether that is all of them?

Thanks,
Sarah

Thanks Sarah: Valois will review these and make the appropriate changes. We plan to have an updated version to you tomorrow after my review later today.

In taking a quick look at your comments, I am wondering if some of your questions have arisen in part because we did not provide you with the visual figures to inform the narrative? Regardless, we will make sure you have all of the figures referred to in this document for your review tomorrow.

Hi Douglas and Valois –

As you suggested following the briefing last week, I took the opportunity to review the briefing doc and add not only my questions but the questions I think Shaun might have (as someone else who is new to this project and reading through the issues for the first time). I know this version of the briefing doc may already be outdated, but I thought it would be helpful if I sent my questions early in the week so you had some more time to think about how to best communicate this huge volume of info. See attached for my comments/questions.

To be clear, I don't need answers to these questions right now – just pointing out areas where I couldn't glean the full picture given the info provided.

I'm in Salt Lake City through tomorrow night, and back in the office on Wed. I'll keep an eye on email if you have any questions today and tomorrow.

Thanks!
Sarah

Darcy: For tomorrow's meeting, we have updated our briefing document to show:

- 1) changes (in red) that reflect the impact of last week's ruling by the Atomic Safety and Licensing Board (ASLB); and
- 2) ORC's analysis of this ruling and how it informs these changes (attachment).
